Hessians push two guns up King Street. American artillery and fire from Mercer’s infantry force them to abandon the guns.

Rall leads his men behind St. Michael’s Church for cover, combines with Lossberg, and are forced toward the American left flank.

Washington shifts Hand/Haussenger to block Rall. The Hessians pull back to the apple orchard for cover.

Rall leads his combined forces to recover his lost guns. They reach the guns under heavy fire from three sides.

After reaching the town, St. Clair’s brigade pours fire into Rall’s flank.

Stephen’s troops charge the Hessians as they reach their guns.

Rall is mortally wounded trying to recover his guns. Now leaderless and surrounded, the remaining Hessians surrender.
