Some of George Washington's Rules of Civility

Every action in company ought to be done with some sign of respect in these present.
- Let your countenance be pleasant, but in serious matters somewhat grave.
- Show not yourself glad at the misfortune of another, though he were your enemy.
- In visiting the sick, do not presently play the physician if you be not knowing therein.
- In writing or speaking, give to every person his due title according to his degree and the custom of the place.
- Use no reproachful language against anyone, neither curse nor revile.
- Associate yourself with men of good quality, if you esteem your own reputation; for it is better to be alone than in bad company.
- Think before you speak — pronounce not imperfectly nor bring out your words too hastily, but orderly and distinctly.
- Labor to keep alive in your breast that little spark of celestial fire called conception.
- When you speak of God or his attributes, let it be seriously and with reverence. Honor and obey your natural parents although they be poor.

Thomas Jefferson's Rules of Conduct

Never put off till tomorrow what you can do today.
- Never think of anything if what you can do yourself.
- Never spend money before you have it.
- Never buy anything you do not want, because it is cheap.
- Pride costs us more than thirst, hunger and cold.
- We seldom repent for having eaten too little.
- Nothing is troublesome that one does of his own volition.
- How much pain never occurred evils cost us.
- Take things all the time by their smooth handle.
- Think as you please, and let others as well, to prevent any disputes.
- When annoyed count 10 before you speak; if very annoyed, count 100.
